

HOLD SEAMAN AS AN ALLEGED SPY

LONDON, Sept. 16.—Lieutenant Helm, the alleged German spy, was arraigned in the Pearlyman Police Court, charged with having committed a felony in furnishing information concerning the Portsmouth defences for the purpose of communicating the same to another state. Helm was arrested while sketching the fortifications. Prosecutor Rodkin at the outset of the proceedings disclaimed any intention of representing the prisoner as the accredited agent of Germany.

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YET?

You are going to buy a suit this Fall. You always do and always will while you live. Dead men buy no clothes. You may have bought already. Several hundred men have ordered suits here since Labor Day. But the great bulk of our Fall trade is still to come.

We would like to include your order among the rest. Why not? We have been talking to you for years and years and never exaggerated anything. And still you hesitate, while others come in—suits and suits every season—and go on our books as regulars for life. Decide to-day. Don't put it off. Our prices are only $13 to $25 for suit or overcoat, and we carry the finest line of woolsens to be found in any tailor shop in the city.

Everything guaranteed. You can't lose. We take all the risk. Now, come in—day or evening.

Jimmy looked at him wonderingly.

"That's right, old man," Doyle said, "telling him about it. I'm not satisfied with just credit, but I've got a hazy idea of how to get it. I'll tell you that I must credit, but if you've got the straight and ran the chance of going back to sea the next day."

Jimmy held out a bloodstained hand to seal the deal.

"All right," Doyle said, "I'll take it and left the room in a hurry. He was a little bit of a coward, but he was a little bit of a coward."

"You understand what I have done?" Doyle asked.

"I understand it all, and understand better than anything else that I have ever heard him say."

THEY ENDED.

NO ONE NEED SUFFER FROM HEADACHE OR RHEUMATISM

Latest Achievement of Science

Now Within the Reach of All

It is so most difficult to understand why so many people continue to suffer from headache and other nervous diseases when a trial of this new medicine preparation called CADUM is made.

Cadum possesses remarkable soothing and healing power. It relieves the most violent headache, soothes the itching spots on the face. Cadum is a new medicine that is not a narcotic, but acts as a barrier in excluding dust, dirt and air from the pores of the skin, thus preventing the things that favor a quick cure.

Blush, Pimples, Blotches, Redness, Itching, Eruptions, Eczema, Scabies, Acne, Herpes, Stomach, Headache, Rheumatism, and all skin diseases can be safely and cured. Large box 25 cents.

The model is made in two tones of brown; a beautiful tan for the body and a deep rich brown for the front and trimmings. It is made of Fleisher's Germantown Zephyr which comes with a soft, fine, even texture and qualities of all the Fleisher Yarns a softness of thread that produces a smooth close texture.

Full directions for making this and many other new and staple articles may be found in the (eighth) edition of Fleisher's Knitting and Crocheting Manual, an invaluable handbook for beginner and expert. Contains a complete course of instruction for knitting our stitches and is the only authoritative guide to fashion in stitches made

Will the Panama Canal Be Fortified?—Yes, It Will

England and the Granting of Other Countries Will Make No Difference. The United States Builds the Canal and WILL CONTROL IT

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Newspapers in England and on the Continent are MOST KINDLY discussing "the right" of the United States to fortify the Panama Canal. Our English friends are inclined to think that it would be UNWISE to fortify the canal. In fact, they have a notion that they ought not to ALLOW IT.

And that appears to be the general idea in Europe. Our brothers across the ocean, toward whom we entertain the deepest affection—and not a little suspicion—think that we ought to build the canal, bringing the east and the west coasts of America close together, offering the greatest possible convenience to the world's shipping—and then allow anybody that chooses to take possession of it and hold it in war time.

It is difficult to imagine anything as foolish as the suggestion that this country should build the canal and leave it UNFORTIFIED.

We thought that matter had been settled a long time ago. When the late John Hay was Secretary of State, and when his particular fad was the promotion of friendly feeling between the English and American peoples—that is to say, as many of the English and American people as speak with an English accent—he arranged for a treaty with England that would compel us to leave the canal UNFORTIFIED.

That treaty very nearly became a law. Mr. Hay was in favor of it and advocated it. Mr. McKinley, who was President, offered no objection to the treaty—and Mr. Roosevelt who now suddenly discovers THAT WE OUGHT TO FORTIFY THE CANAL, at that time was in favor of leaving it UNFORTIFIED.

Fortunately the thing was not left entirely to Mr. Hay, or to Mr. Roosevelt, or to the clever English Ambassador.

The Hearst newspapers interested themselves to the extent of letting the people and public officials know the facts.

The American recently published an editorial account of that history—the persistent fight made by W. R. Hearst and his newspapers against an UNFORTIFIED canal.

As the result of that fight, the Hay treaty was defeated, the Senate of the United States reversed its own decision BY A VOTE OF 65 TO 17, AND ADOPTED THE DAVIS AMENDMENT, WHICH PERMITTED THE FORTIFYING OF THE CANAL. All of that about ten years ago.

W. R. Hearst, whose newspapers had persistently urged the building of the canal, was in Egypt when that Hay proposition to leave the canal UNFORTIFIED—AS A LITTLE COURTESY TO ENGLAND AND THE ENGLISH NAVY—was communicated to him by cable. Under his instructions a fight was made that defeated the plan to make the canal a convenience to all of the world in time of peace AND AN UNFORTIFIED MENACE TO THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA IN TIME OF WAR.

We thought the whole thing had been settled then. Certainly it was thrashed out, and certainly public opinion all over the country, vigorously—in response to interviews obtained by the Hearst newspapers—declared against an UNFORTIFIED canal, against the opinion of John Hay and the opinion of Roosevelt—both of whom opposed fortification.

It is surprising now to find the question raised again. It is amusing as well as surprising to find the versatile Mr. Roosevelt suddenly discovering that he is the advocate of a fortified canal—HE, THE MAN WHO FORMERLY OPPOSED FORTIFICATION.

The matter is interesting, but it is not important. It is not important, BECAUSE THE CANAL WILL BE FORTIFIED!

It is built with American money, by American enterprise.

It is built uselessly, in part to help the commerce of the whole world.

It is built also selfishly, or, rather, PATRIOTICALLY, for the convenience and protection of the United States.

This canal in time of war would solve the problem of quick transportation of our fleet from the east to the west coast—without going around South America.

And in time of war it would permit travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific TO OUR FLEET ONLY. For the canal will have fortifications owned and controlled by the United States that will keep out any other fleet but our own or the fleets of our allies IN TIME OF WAR.

To discuss the pros and cons of fortification is absolutely idiotic. If a man in a country infested with bandits opened a new door in his house he would laugh if people requested him not to put a lock upon the door.

He would say, naturally, "This is MY house and MY DOOR, built for MY convenience. It will be locked and bolted for MY PROTECTION, whenever burglars are around."

Naturally, our dear British brethren would like us to leave the canal UNFORTIFIED. They spend their hundreds of millions annually on an enormous navy. If they had trouble with us, it would be very convenient to have the canal UNFORTIFIED. Or if they were engaged in oppressing some small South American country, in violation of the Monroe Doctrine, it would be very nice to have that canal open to their ships—especially as they themselves have fortifications right at the mouth of the canal and coaling stations surrounding it.

As matters stand to-day, Great Britain has her fortifications in Canada, her special canal to facilitate the entrance of fighting ships to our lakes, in case we should have war. She has arranged fortified entrances to our big lake region, that would enable her to bombard our lake cities. She would be very much surprised if we requested her NOT to fortify her Canadian territory, not to protect the locks of her own canal, not to have fortifications in her various Atlantic and Pacific possessions.

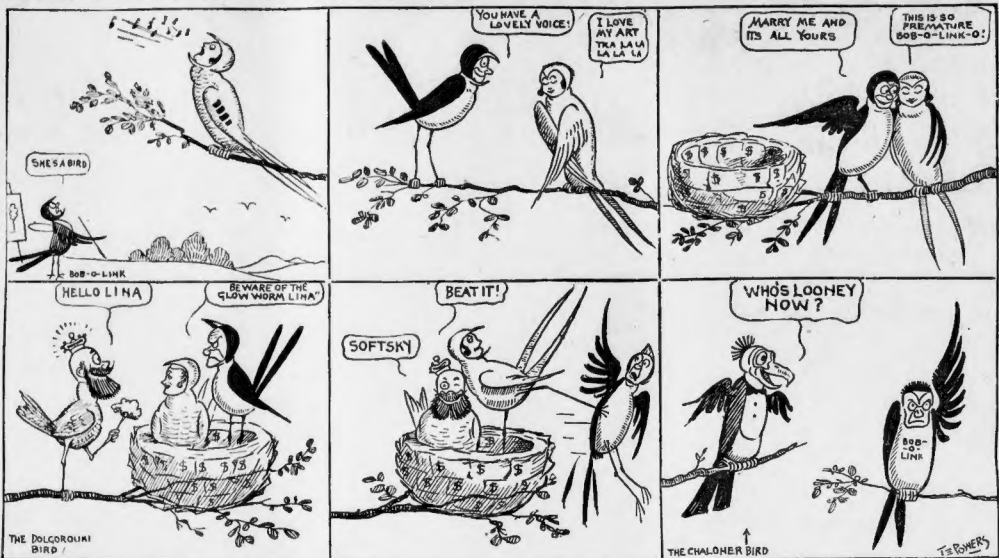

And she has the impertinence, the comic audacity, to suggest that when we dig a highway connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific, we should leave that highway UNFORTIFIED and open to any fleet that might want a convenient passage in war time from one of our coasts to the other.

It is well, perhaps, that Mr. Roosevelt, who in one of his moods wanted the canal UNFORTIFIED, should now wake up to the fact that what the Hearst newspapers said ten years ago is true.

But it isn't very important. Only an idiot in a country infested by bandits would leave his front door without a lock or his house without a protective weapon. Only an idiot nation would spend hundreds of millions digging a Panama canal and then leave it UNFORTIFIED, in an age like this.

The fortification of the canal will count for peace, because the people of the United States are peaceful. They do not want war—and a well-fortified canal that would enable them to interfere with the warlike plans of fighting nations would do infinitely more for peace than a canal UNFORTIFIED.

And if the reverse were the case, the canal would be fortified none the less. And no man in office or out of office, unless he were a sentimental idiot, would suggest anything else.

Even as You and I!
